INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

This publication includes the table of contents of - the bulletins of the Societies of the International League for 1973. The main value of issuing such a publication lies in the facility which it creater in this field for Societies to follow the development of member nations. However, in most cases the bulletins deal with very definite aspects of the Societies and of the handicapped people and families they represent, their - publication should also interest other people or groups of people, experts, scientists, politicians, etc. involved in the -- subject, since the implicit problems should not go unnoticed.

On the other hand, many of the articles have come -- out of actual experience which ought to be shared as an example of what can and should be done, as well as to prevent duplication of effort. Exchanging news, experiences, projects and problems between developed, underdeveloped, and developing countries (the three levels are represented in the bulletins included herein) cannot but enrich each other. For instance, problems which are latent in Europe may well wxist in a prominent an easily identifiable form in North Africa. Literature proceeding from this part of the world might well help in the rediscovery -or create an awareness- of problems that might well be judged to be outdated, or already solved in that they have ceased to be of a critical nature. Again, North Africa could well identify future problems through the European literature.

Some of the indicated bulletins have enjoized prestige over many years, and have been internationally published. The purpose of the present volume is to highlight those works which, for one reason or another, are less well known. We have taken the opportunity of up-dating their contents, especially in the case of articles written in languages which cover small geographic areas. In order to offer the fullest possible help and promote diffusion of the works that have been selected, the Information Service provides photocopies of the articles, and would undertake arranging for translations into French, English, German and Spanish.

Arrangement of Work

Work is divided into two sections. In the first, the articles published in bulletins are classified according to -- the various matters so as to facilitate work for those who are interested in a determined speciality. In the second, the articles, books and general literature mentioned or recommended in the bulletins are conveniently gathered and duly classified, - too, according to each particular subject. We wish to point -- that the compilation included in this second part is not an -- exhaustive bibliography. It does not conform to any selective principles of the Information Service, and there is not attempt to proportion the material included in each chapter of subjects It is, as we have already indicated, a listing of all the titles which, for some reason (review, information, advice, etc.) have been mentioned in the bulletins. We have taken great care to state the number of the publication and the page where the aforementioned titles appeare, so that when necessary, the reader may obtain better references.

Comment

This work is very far from being complete. While we have no wish to avoid responsibility, it ought to be noted -- that task of arranging such heterogeneous material, with originals in such differing languages, has been difficult. On the other hand, some publications are not as well laid out as they should be. Many even lack a table of contents, and the contents of others resemble a newspaper more than a magazine, which makes for difficulty in sifting their contents so as to draw up a table.

The problem of classifying works into subjects is even more difficult. Here we accept responsibility for all errors. We know that it is dangerous to make a directory of subjects according to personal criteria. So, our criterion is public and we trust that its deficiencies can be corrected by the constructive criticism of readers. In all events, we hope that basically the arrangement we have carried out will be useful and valid, and that in future publications it will be corrected and completed.
